BACCARAT VERDICT.

The King Can Do No Wrong.

THE JUSTICE CHARGED THE JURY

A Doughty Warrior Refused a Hearing.

Jury Confined to the Single Issue.

Baccarat Verdict.

By Cable and Associated Press.
LONDON, June 9.—The jury in the baccarat trial returned a verdict in favor of Sir William Gordon Cumming.

LATER—The verdict of the jury is against Sir William Gordon Cumming, not in favor, as at first announced.

The Prince of Wales was not present this morning when the court trying the baccarat scandal case convened. The Lord Chief Justice had hardly taken his seat when Gen. Owen Williams stepped to the front bench and said, his face pale and his voice husky: "My Lord, I have to ask your protection. Yesterday Sir Edward Clarke thought proper," here Solicitor General Sir Edward Clarke sprang to his feet and interrupted General Williams exclaiming: "I ask your Lordship to interfere and that General Williams should not be allowed to make a statement, as he has not the privilege of doing so." To this General Williams hotly replied, "I was accused of an abominable charge." Here the Lord Chief Justice interposed, saying: "I do not remember the expression, but I do not think you can be allowed to speak." But General Williams persisted in being heard, remarking angrily: "We were accused of sacrificing innocent men. This statement is made without any evidence being brought forward for justification." Lord Coleridge again interrupted the General, remarking with considerable warmth, "I cannot hear any statement from you," and immediately commenced his summing up, while General Williams retired, frowning and greatly discontented with his seat. The Chief Justice said that if the jury found defendants had spoken the truth their verdict should be for the defendants. But if the jury thought the charges they made were not true and that Sir William Gordon Cumming did not do anything wrong while playing baccarat at Tranby Croft in September last their verdict must be for the plaintiff. Continuing, the Chief Justice analyzed at length the evidence given by the plaintiff, which evidence he said is well worthy of consideration. During another portion of his summing up Lord Coleridge said the Prince of Wales presence at Tranby Croft was sufficient to explain Lyett Green's objection to creating a disturbance in the baccarat room or elsewhere, by calling attention to the action which he objected to on the part of Sir William Gordon Cumming.

Lord Coleridge called the attention of the jury to one particular observation which was made in behalf of plaintiff in the course of the trial. It was to the effect that there "was more in the case than appeared on the surface," "against this," the Lord Chief Justice remarked, "I most emphatically protest; the jury has nothing to do with things which are not on the surface. You have to confine yourself to the single issue and what you have heard and what has been proved during the trial." When Lord Coleridge had proceeded thus far with his charge to the jury the hour of noon had arrived and court as usual adjourned for lunch.

When the Chief Justice defined the law of libel as different from the law of slander and when he gave special instructions in regard to the amount of damages which a jury should if they so desired, assess, in event they found the case for plaintiff, it was considered that Lord Coleridge's instructions decidedly favored Sir William Gordon Cumming. But when the Chief Justice analyzed the evidence of defendants and General Williams, Prince of Wales and Lord Coventry, it was judged this was, in effect, an endorsement of their evidence. In this connection, Lord Coleridge said, "Cumming did not come there to make a fortune, and that his character would be sufficiently cleared by the jury awarding him, should the evidence warrant it, a small amount of damages." Lord Coleridge also described at length the high position and brave career of Sir William Gordon Cumming, saying the latter went to Tranby Croft as an honored guest, and, if I might be permitted to say so, "as a sort of prize guest of whom any hostess might be proud." Referring to the Prince of Wales connection with the case, Lord Coleridge said "people may say what they like, but they are all very much pleased to have such guests as the Prince of Wales, Lord Coventry and Lord this and Lord that in their huts." [Laughter.] "That as to the position of the Prince of Wales and as to the desire for secrecy manifested by the party at Tranby Croft, was it not natural that with such monarchical institutions as ours such a wish should have existed?"

It must be remembered such incidents were brought before a hard judging world, not by a loyal and subservient world of tutors, but before a world whose sense and judgment had to be consulted. Surely it was not to be said against a man that under circumstances he is anxious to keep the scandal quiet.

After luncheon the Lord Chief Justice resumed his summing up. While admitting the improbability of a man of Sir William Gordon Cumming's position and wealth lowering himself to cheat, and to cheat his friend, the Prince of Wales, too, Lord Coleridge made a strong point against plaintiff in calling the jury's attention to his failure to face his accusers.

Lord Coleridge then said: We have now come to a very important point, in my mind. I have carefully searched for, but have been unable to find any contradiction of the statement that Sir William Gordon Cumming was informed of Lyett Green's desire to be confronted with him. "If I am wrong," added the Lord Chief Justice, turning to Sir Edward Clarke, "I desire so be corrected."

Sir Edward, for plaintiff, said there was no evidence that Sir William was informed of Lyett Green's desire to be confronted with him, the plaintiff. Thereupon Sir Charles Russell, for defendant, promptly rose and read from General Williams' testimony that the latter had said in court that he had informed Sir William Gordon Cumming of Lyett Green's desire to be confronted with him.

Lord Coleridge, when both had said all they wished on the above point, dwelt at length upon it, his remarks not being in favor of plaintiff.

The audience, especially the fashionably dressed ladies in the gallery, paid but little attention to the summing up and charge of the Lord Chief Justice. On the other hand, Cumming and all the defendants paid undivided attention to every word uttered by the Lord Chief Justice. When the case was finally given to the jury everybody seemed relieved. From the time the jury retired to deliberate upon their verdict until they returned to the court room, only fifteen minutes elapsed, showing apparently they were of one opinion as to the merits of the case. When the clerk of the court suddenly announced the jury ready to report, there was a movement of surprise throughout the audience, the short absence of the jury being regarded as decidedly unfavorable to the plaintiff. Everybody may be said to have been in a breathless state when the jury re-entered their box, looking rather frightened and very nervous. The announcement of a verdict for defendants was received with a slight hissing from the gallery where the ladies were congratulating and upon the part of some of those in the body of the court who were in sympathy with plaintiff. The court officers had some difficulty for some time in suppressing these marks of principally feminine disapprobation of the verdict. They were, however, eventually suppressed, and court adjourned.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 9.—Acting Secretary Chandler has approved the circular letter to registers and receivers, prepared by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which prescribes rules and regulations for making selections of land in Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Washington under the grants made those States under the enabling act of February 22, 1889.

In addition to the grant of each of these States of the 16th and 36th sections, there is also granted to each for various educational purposes 500,000 acres and 32,000 acres for the erection of public buildings at the several State capitals.

The act of March 2, 1881, granting lands for penitentiary purposes to South Dakota, is extended and made applicable to Montana, North Dakota and Washington.

There are also granted 120,000 acres to South Dakota for agricultural purposes, and to each of the other States 90,000 acres for the same purpose.

Persecuting the Jews.

By Cable and Associated Press.
LONDON, June 9.—The news received from a correspondent at Odessa says the Jewish emigration is increasing there, owing to the uncertainty of the government's intentions. The financial insecurity and acute public credit is so undermined that the Finance Minister, Vichnegradski, has become alarmed and promised to ameliorate the condition of the Jews, but the latter place no reliance in his promises.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 9.—It is semi-officially stated that the Czar, having learned that Jews expelled from Moscow were brutally treated and not given time to settle their affairs, has given orders to the authorities to observe the utmost care which directs the expulsion to be effected gradually, in order to enable the Jews to wind up their business.

Soldiers Killed by Lightning.

By Cable and Associated Press.
BERLIN, June 9.—A strange and fatal accident occurred at Templehof this morning in the presence of the Emperor. The Grenadiers were being drilled by the Emperor. While the men were being put through their exercises a vivid flash of lightning hurled a number of them to the ground. The officer in command, Captain Von Quast, and three soldiers were knocked insensible. Two of the latter died almost immediately afterward and the captain and the other soldier were dangerously injured. A horse was also killed. It is supposed the rifle barrels and bayonets of the soldiers attracted the electricity which caused such fatal results.

Farmers Alliance.

By Associated Press.
LACROSSE (Wis.), June 9.—The State Farmers Alliance met in convention in this city this morning to continue two days. The prime object of the gathering is for the discussion of a project to organize all the farmers societies under one head. After a number of addresses were made the convention went into secret session at 11 o'clock and remained so until noon.

Among those present are President Polk of the National Farmers Alliance and Representative Jesse Simpson.

The fruit was mostly over-ripe. Some small and slackly packed fruit brought lower prices. Apricots in cherry boxes not wanted.

Prussian Politics.

By Cable and Associated Press.
BERLIN, June 9.—A sensation is caused by the publication in the life of Duncker of a letter from the late Emperor Frederick to Duncker, his political advisor, dated June 14, 1893, at which time the conflict between the King and Prussian Parliament was at its height, and about a week after Frederick's famous speech at Dantzic, in which he publicly refused to be identified with the then recent acts of the Minister. The letter repudiates the suggestion that his action was the outcome of a secret alliance with the Progressist party. Frederick said he does not fear the publication of the correspondence with his father, which Progressists threaten, because he alone had possession of the letters, unless, and this would not surprise him, a system of Bismarckian espionage had secured copies. He declares he is powerless to prevent any party claiming him. He has no desire to be an Opposition leader and he has no communication with the Waldeck party, but he has a strong sympathy with the Freisinnige party.

Forest Fires.

By Associated Press.
ST. JOHN (N. F.), June 9.—Forest fires are raging in the roads opposite Campbellton on the North Shore and people of that town are alarmed. The whole peninsula, over 100 miles in length is threatened and the village of Newcastle is in danger. Farmers lost crops, fences and outbuildings. Nothing but rain will prevent a general destruction. The loss is already very great. Fires are sweeping away the woods between Penobscot and Annapolis, destroying a great deal of valuable timber.

THREE RIVERS (Que.), June 9.—Forest fires are raging along the Grand Piles branch of the Canadian Pacific Railroad north of here. Men are out in large numbers trying to save the endangered property.

The Omnibus Strike.

By Cable and Associated Press.
LONDON, June 9.—There is little change in the omnibus strike this morning and very few busses are running.

The officials of the company say they received 1,400 applications from men desirous of filling the places made vacant by the strikers. None of these men have been engaged, however, it being the object to give the strikers time to reconsider their positions and return to work. In order to prevent the horses from suffering a number of policemen are detailed to assist the company in feeding and in other ways taking care of the horses. Pirate or "scab" omnibuses are reaping a harvest.

Building Association Fails.

By Associated Press.
BALTIMORE, June 9.—The alleged shortage of accounts of the late Jacob Bonnet, Secretary of the Rothschild Building Association, has caused Ernest M. Bonnet, son of deceased, to make an assignment for the benefit of the creditors. Jacob and his son formerly conducted a boot and shoe business together. The assignment, it is said, is a precautionary measure. The receiver estimates the liabilities of the Building Association will aggregate $100,000. Assets are about $6,000 or $8,000 in mortgages and what may be realized from Jacob Bonnet's estate.

The Hayti Riot.

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 9.—The Haytian Minister, Prince, speaking of the late revolt at Port-au-Prince, says to-day the trouble on May 28th which caused so much bloodshed, was not a revolution against the government of Hippolyte, but a riot instigated by a few pre-heads who sought personal gain. The political leaders of the party opposed to Hippolyte, he said, were not implicated in the affair.

Railroad Collision.

By Associated Press.

M. a private funeral service was conducted at the Earncliffe house. Later the remains were borne to the Senate Chamber by six members of the dominion police. Six carriages, in which were seated the relatives and personal friends of the deceased, followed. At 10 o'clock the Senate doors were thrown open for Lord Stanley, accompanied by his staff, who were the first to enter; next came the members of the Cabinet, Senators and members of Parliament. Thousands of ladies paid their last tribute to the late Premier. The House, last night, after touching addresses being made by members, adjourned until June 16.

A Silver Syndicate.

It is not surprising that the condition of the silver market should attract the attention of speculators. The Call says: The first advantage presented by a silver speculation is that there cannot be much loss. Silver below $1 an ounce is a safe investment with a prospect of 30 per cent rise. A French syndicate, which is reported as contemplating the purchase of the American surplus in sight, has ascertained that the floating stock of silver in Europe is about exhausted. The American product is absorbed in the arts and the Government purchases. It is thought, therefore, that if the surplus in sight in New York is made unavailable the owners will be in a position to fix the price. If the assumption is correct that the European store of silver is exhausted a syndicate would not require a very large capital to corner the market. In estimating the amount of silver in Europe it should be remembered that the silver coin of France and other countries of the Latin union is held at its face value in gold. It is not likely to be thrown upon the market at much less than $1.29 an ounce. The dispatch which speculates upon the formation of a silver syndicate refers to the probability that the gold countries of Europe will be driven to adopt the bi-metallic standard. This probability is greater than is generally realized. There is not a nation in Europe, possibly excepting France, that is not quaking with fear lest Russia shall withdraw its gold deposits from the several European banks. It is to provide against such an emergency that $40,000,000 of gold has been withdrawn from the United States. To get this amount considerable sacrifice had to be made. With a trade balance in our favor gold would not go abroad in large quantities unless it was paid for going. European statesmen may be convinced by the present financial conditions that the gold basis is too narrow to be safe. The volume of national debts payable in gold increases each year, but the stock of gold does not increase.

RICHMOND, Va., is congratulating itself upon having doubled its population, and much more than doubled its wealth and business resources since the war. The Republican party does not begrudge this Southern city the gains it has made under Republican policy. It knows that not only Richmond, but many other Southern cities largely owe their prosperity to that policy, and feels confident that in the near future they will appreciate the fact and conform their political principles to their business interests.

THE Morning Times is the name of a new paper just started in Carson. It has sprung into existence to "fill a long-felt want" and will most likely live until it finds that "want" has been supplied by the papers already there, then turn up its toes and go to the happy newspaper heaven, where it will find a lot of hand presses and several bushels of old type that have been wrecked on the rock of "long-felt wants." Its editor will have the "experience" that so many need and no doubt be a wiser if not better man.

THE Internal Revenue Bureau is getting ready to put in operation the sugar-bounty feature of the McKinley bill, which will take effect July 1st. The beet and sorghum growers of Kansas and Nebraska, who joined the Farmers' Alliance, and howled at protection in any shape may experience a change of mind with their bounties jingling in their pockets.

THE San Francisco Chronicle issued a thirty-two page edition Sunday, thirteen pages of which is devoted to California's irrigation system and is very interesting reading. It shows what Nevada might do in the same line. Truly the Chronicle is a great newspaper.

COL. JOHN P. IRISH will start a weekly Democratic sheet in San Francisco. Col. Irish is a gentleman of ability, and no doubt will make his weekly a success.

AT AN "OLD HOSS" SALE.

Some of the Quirky Things Bought and the Buyers Sold.

An "old hoss" sale is a funny sight. It is a kind of lottery after all, and to what extremes the followers of the fickle goddess of chance will go is shown with many striking incidents. The various express companies, at stated periods during the year, sell the unclaimed packages that have accumulated in their offices. All day an east Washington street auction-room has been crowded with men, women, old and young, eager bidders at the so-called "old hoss" sale, says the Philadelphia Call. Packages, bundles and brunks of every description were brought forward by the valuable auctioneer. "Here is a trunk," said he, "that may contain silk dresses." A man paid a big round dollar for it. Opening it he found a lot of old calico dresses and aprons. One man paid 25 cents for a small keg labeled "handle with care." Dynamite? He thought so. Cautiously, in a back room, it was opened. It contained axle grease. A "cuddled gem" man" paid $1 for a trunk filled with air. A dude secured a package with a Bible inside the wrapper for 20 cents. A gentleman with a shining silk "tile" and wearing a "creased" pair of trousers paid $1.85 for a package containing a pair of overalls. For 25 cents a man got a miniature sewing machine, and a lady paid 30 cents for a box containing a dude's laundry—shirts, collars, cuffs, etc. One fellow bought a package of four water vases and thought they were some new-fangled bric-a-brac. A colored girl secured a package of jewelry for 25 cents, just what she wanted. A man with one eye got a box of spectacles. A carpenter secured a package of blacksmith's tools. One fellow, who said he didn't smoke, purchased a large case of "red letter smoking tobacco" for $1.05. A colored man got a trunk full of dishes for $1.30, and a lady buyer found a "governor" for an engine in the package she opened. A young man paid 10 cents for a tintype of an old lady with two grandchildren about her lap—a photograph of a dear relative had gone astray. A young lady secured a package of gentlemen's socks, and a boy bought an immense iron pulley for 15 cents.

This "sight unseen" misfit sale continued hour after hour, and as the packages were opened by the buyers there were great surprises, laughter and grins. Every class of people was represented, and a man remarked on leaving, after the sale closed: "I have laughed more here to-day than I ever did before in all my life."

APRIL FOOLED.

The Mortifying Experience of a Traveler in Spain.

A traveler is likely to be seriously galled by the practical jokes of foreign countries. With the witticisms of his native land, to which he is accustomed, he can contend, but there is an alarming element of the unexpected in those of other races, writes Irving Montagu, in "Wanderings of a War Artist."

One evening I met two very fascinating Spanish girls in a quiet quarter of Irun, one of whom, being a blonde, was enveloped in a white mantilla.

It being customary on meeting a white mantilla to extend her somewhat similar homage to that paid to royalty, I raised my hat, and stepped on one side to allow the couple to pass, when, in doing so, I saw, to my horror, by the light of the moon, that they were followed closely by a grim and grotesque reptile, half lizard, half frog, which, with a series of spasmodic bounds, was making directly for their heels.

O, the horrid beast, the indescribable monstrosity! To rush forward and trample on the uncanny thing was the work of a moment.

I was dumfounded; my exploit of heroism, far from inducing the gratitude I expected, was immediately followed by roars of laughter, the merry ring of which reverberated on the still night air.

"Unconscionable fool" does not express the littleness I felt, as I was subjected to the ridicule of those wily demons, and if a man is capable of that becoming peculiarity, I must have blushed scarlet.

I had trodden on El drap—a piece of cloth cut into the semblance of some monstrous lizard, and attached by a thread to the skirt of the maiden, so that, by certain dexterous movements and hitches, it could be made to leap after her as she hurried along. It was the Basque equivalent for the old English jokes practiced on the first of April.

How to Breathe Properly.

In all the various systems of physical culture now in vogue the greatest importance is attached to taking the breath properly. The breathing should be slow and deep, six breaths a minute being a safe average. There is still a difference of opinion in respect to the relative value of abdominal and chest breathing, and each system has its advantages. One of the best exercises for increasing the capacity of the lungs is to draw a full breath very slowly and through the nose. Keep the lungs inflated as long as possible and then expel the air suddenly through the mouth and repeat the process. Care should be taken not to try to make the period of holding the breath too long at the start; the more gradually the power of doing this is attained, the better will be the permanent results. There are many breathing exercises, and one of the best is the taking of a deep breath and swinging the arms, first one then the other and finally both, while the breath is inhaled. Excessive practice of any system should be avoided and the golden rule of taking moderate and judicious exercise should be observed.

THE duke of Westminster, England's wealthiest nobleman, is engaged in a squabble with a surgeon over the cost of embalming the body of the duke's son. The surgeon wants two hundred and twenty-two pounds and six shillings and the duke is only willing to pay forty-two pounds.

H. J. BIBLE of Lyon county, Kan., rented a farm last year for $380 on which he raised 8,000 bushels of corn. At present prices his crop would bring $4,000. He had no one to help him but his son, but Providence may have favored him on account of his name.

A FEARLESS JUDGE.

Lively Recollections of a Quaint and Original Character.

Judge Noah Smith, a citizen of Jefferson county, who died recently in his 70th year, was, in many respects, a remarkable man, writes a Louisville (Ga.) correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution. His educational opportunities were very limited, and he never read books or papers to much extent, but was a close listener and read men thoroughly. His native "mother wit," or shrewdness and good sense born in him, were of very high order; and it was his delight to associate with the noble and intelligent, and this coupled with his natural good sense made him conversant with the current topics of the day and a very interesting associate to the most cultured that he came in contact with.

A more honest man in principle never lived; and his goodness of heart kept under control his fiery temper, and made him kind and considerate under the greatest provocations. A list of his traits, I will mention, that coming one evening from the mill below him he espied a runaway slave close to the road behind a tree. He interrogated him and soon discovered that he had left his master without permission. He told the negro that he must go home with him, but the former, who was very strongly built and armed with a huge club, replied with an oath that he had "started to Augusta and would go there," and walked off. When about sixty yards distant the judge emptied one barrel of his gun at him, but it seemed to make no impression as the shot were small. After the second fire the negro went staggering along as if mortally wounded, though not a solitary shot had pierced his skin. It was all a sham for a purpose. It was getting dark and the judge couldn't bear the idea of the negro's dying in the woods without attention, so he jumped from his saddle and pursued him.

The latter retreated until he reached a pond studded with black gums. He now turned upon the judge, throwing water and mud in his face to confuse him. As soon as he was in reach the latter clubbed his gun and struck him a blow which he parried with his club. He drew his gun back to strike a second blow when it hitched to a limb behind him, and while trying to extricate it the negro brought his club down on top of his head with all his power, which nearly proved fatal, adding: "I reckon you will go now." The judge replied: "I will for a short time," and went reeling out of the pond.

As soon as he reached home he bound up the wound and sent after a pack of hounds. When it came he joined in the chase and that night the negro was brought to bay in a thicket in Richmond county and fought furiously as he could not reasonably hope for mercy. Several men present armed with clubs and pistols wanted to kill him on the spot, but the judge interceded and saved his life. The next day he gave him a moderate whipping and returned him to his owner.

Upon another occasion he came upon a runaway who was slashing his favorite hounds to pieces with a scythe blade. He knocked the weapon out of his hand, captured him and ordered him no further violence.

He seemed to be an entire stranger to fear in everything outside of religion. I saw him one day in a hunt, when an old buck had just been jumped by a fleet pack of hounds—and had nearly a mile the start of him—make an effort to head him. There was only one stand four miles away. The judge took his hat and bridle reins in one hand and double-barrel in the other and went, as hard as his horse could stave, uphill and downhill and over bridges the entire distance. But the buck came out two huddled yards ahead. It was the grandest man and buck race upon record! It makes my nerves tingle to think of it even now.

FIRING A REVOLVER.

To Attain Rapidity and Accuracy Do Not Aim Along the Sights.

Capt. J. Forman, Thirteenth Infantry, says in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "It is a peculiar fact that very few men, even accomplished shots, know how a revolver ought to be handled. Nearly all of them are taught to aim a revolver as if it were a rifle; that is, by bringing the object aimed at and the fore and hind sights into line. This is all well enough for shooting-gallery practice, but should never be followed in the field. In training troops to use the revolver they are taught, in aiming, never to look at the weapon at all, but to keep their eyes on the object to be struck. In quick firing, and especially in shooting from horseback, much better results are obtainable in this way. A man throwing a stone does not look at his hand; neither does a billiard player sight along his cue. The same rules apply to the use of shot weapons. I have seen men trained to shoot excellently at a mark when it stood exactly between their pistol sights at all. Pieces of pasteboard were fastened just in front of the cylinders, which effectively prevented the men from using their fore-sights, and greatly increased the rapidity, as well as the accuracy, of their fire. Nearly anyone can sight a pistol correctly, the inaccuracy of the aim being due to trembling of the hands before the trigger is pressed. By hiding the sight the temptation to hold too long is removed, and the first aim, generally the most accurate, is preserved."

Abrasion of Gold Coin.

Gold while in circulation is handled less than any other medium. It is usually kept in vaults of banks for demand rarely made, and for this reason the loss by abrasion is but 1/4 of 1 per cent. in twenty years. In a $20 gold piece, the standard weight of which is 516 grains, the government allowance for loss by abrasion is 2.58 grains.

Americans in Italy.

It is estimated that there are always fifty thousand Americans in Italy, and that there are now about ten times as many Italians in this country. Nearly all the Americans in Italy are well off, and nearly all the Italians who come to this country are in poverty. In most cases the Americans who go to Italy spend a few weeks or months there, while the Italians who come to the United States expect to stay here. The Americans in Italy spend their money; the Italians in the United States earn money.

Pimples.

The old idea was that facial eruptions were due to a "blood humor," for which they gave potash. Thus the old Sarsaparilla contained potash, a drastic mineral, that instead of decreasing, actually creates more eruptions. You have noticed this when taking other Sarsaparillas. It is however now known that the stomach, the blood creating power, is the seat of all vitiating or cleansing operations. A stomach clogged by indigestion or constipation, vitiates the blood, result pimples. A clean stomach and healthful digestion purifies it and they disappear. Thus Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla is compounded after the modern idea to regulate the bowels and stimulate the digestion. The effect is immediate. A short testimonial to contrast the action of the potash Sarsaparilla and Joy's. Mrs. C. D. Stuart, of 400 Hayes St., S. F., writes: "I have for years had indigestion. I tried a popular Sarsaparilla but it actually caused more pimples to break out on my face. Hearing that Joy's was a later preparation and acted differently, I tried it and the pimples immediately disappeared."

Scrofula Sores. "My adopted boy, aged 14 years, suffered terribly from scrofula sores on his leg, which spread till they at one time formed one great sore from the calf of his leg up to his thigh, partially covered with scab, and discharging matter continually. The muscles became contracted so that his leg was drawn up and he could hardly walk. We tried everything we could hear of, without success, until we began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In just a month, after he had taken two-thirds of a bottle, the sores entirely healed, his leg is perfectly straight, and he Can Walk as Well as Ever. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever saw for scrofulous humor. It has done its work more than satisfactorily." WILLIAM SANDERS, Rockdale, Milam County, Texas.

THE COINAGE OF GOLD AND SILVER.

The Question Ably Handled by a Gentleman Who Has Given It Much Thought.

If the facts were admissible they would show that certain moneyed influences took advantage of the proposed absorption of $54,000,000 per annum of silver bullion by the federal government to reap the benefits derivable from the hoped-for advance in the value of silver through government absorption. The available stock of domestic silver not being sufficient, foreign silver was imported and domestic gold exchanged for it. The assertions of the advocates of a single standard that silver coined at its present value of "sixteen to one" of gold will drive from the country the latter, is answered by this fact: While the balance of trade is in our favor, that balance must be settled by gold and silver, and at the bullion value of each in the creditor's country. If the balance of trade be against us, it must be settled in the same manner. Our gold is not going abroad unless there is an equivalent given in exchange for it. Moreover, while foreign capital is seeking investment in this country, not through mere sentiment, but because of greater returns for its use, a foreign market while the home market is more remunerative. The home demand for silver will absorb all that the American mines can supply if the producers can have it coined into lawful money by paying the cost of refining and coining it.

With some exceptions, the opponents of silver coinage are in favor of "protection of American industries." In other words, lead, iron and coal should be protected against similar products from foreign countries, but not one of these advocates has been found who would put silver mining among the list of protected industries. No one yet has risen in his place in the national halls of legislation and demanded "home protection" for the benefit of the miners engaged in silver mining. Nevertheless, when the value of the bullion extracted from the ore is compared with the value of the product of the "protected" mining industries, it will be found to be of sufficient importance to command more consideration than it has hitherto received. It may be remarked here that unlimited coinage of the bullion product of our silver mines into lawful money will give an impetus to both gold and silver mining which cannot but result in greater activity in all industrial and commercial enterprises.

While the silver output will be increased, the gold output will be increased. The Comstock lode of Nevada carries four-tenths gold and six-tenths silver. The legal right to have this bullion coined on payment of the cost would result in making many dividend paying properties, which are now assessment paying properties. Notwithstanding these properties which show a deficit are of great value to the nation, for all the bullion extracted is sold wealth, and lubricates the wheels of commerce every where. The farmer, the manufacturer of machinery and all the materials used in mining are paid for, and every one furnishing anything required in exportation and development receives a benefit.

Unlimited coinage of the silver output of our mines means employment to a large number of the workers in the world, a large consumption of agricultural and manufacturers products; the construction of permanent improvements in the States and Territories directly interested, as well as the States furnishing the means for the development of the industry. It will increase the output of all the bullion mining industries, and more than one-half of this will be paid to labor in the vicinity of the mines.

The opponents of the use of silver as lawful money alarm the people by the cry, that if we adopt its use in that capacity our country will be made the dumping ground for the silver produced in other countries. This alarm may be dispelled by this fact: No commercial nation is going to export its silver bullion to this country whether of gold, silver, lead, copper or iron or steel, on any other country unless it be done in exchange for something that one nation wants to buy and the other wants to sell. An English sovereign is exchanged for wheat, as so many grains of gold of a certain fineness measured by its value as bullion. When the value is determined it goes to the mint and is made into American coin without charge for minting. The cost, whatever it may be, is a charge upon the public treasury. This charge for re-coining should be paid by the depositor. Gold bullion (an all gold is bullion, except it bears the stamp of the American mints upon it) should be coined in unlimited quantities on payment of seigniorage covering cost, and the money thus coined should be a legal tender for all balances and dues, public or private. So, also, should the product of an American silver mine be placed on the same plane. But neither the producers of either gold or silver bullion should be exempt from paying the cost of making lawful money out of his bullion. The maintenance of free refining and minting establishments by the Government is no more desirable than maintaining free mills for manufacturing flour.

It is believed that the foregoing touches on most of the phases that have been presented by the opponents of the use of silver as money, and it has volunteered some suggestions which would avert any danger of a surplus of silver money, if such a result be possible. If the circulation of silver coin east of the silver producing States and Territories were to become as general as its circulation is in the latter, unlimited coinage for all the silver would not overstock the market. In the opinion of many able financiers the unlimited coinage of silver will make the silver and gold dollar of equal value. If it does, it will be sure to enliven and put into action many of the great industrial forces of the country which, for want of capital are lying dormant. It will not, however, make it possible for any one to obtain a dollar without exchanging for it an equivalent in something of equal value. The industrial enterprises it will cause to spring into life however, will enable the man who is the owner of willing hands to exchange their use for that which will purchase the farmers' breadstuffs, the grocers' provisions, the shoemaker and tailors' handiwork, the books for the instruction of the children, and comfort for all dependent upon him, and a higher intelligence for himself. While it may not put into his pocket two dollars for the same that he has exchanged for one dollar, it will by industrial development and trade activities enable him to find use for his hands to earn two dollars, where now for lack of demand for their use he can earn only one.

A PIONEER.

SENSATIONAL SUICIDE.

Fred Boegle of Virginia City Suicides on Sunday Last.

On Sunday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock a sensational suicide occurred at Virginia City. The victim of his own rash act was named Fred Boegle, aged 18 years, and the son of Antoine Boegle. It seems he had been employed at the candy store of Otto Hartung, and had been discharged. He brooded over the matter and ended the trouble by taking a dose of strychnine, and died under the trestle works of the Union Con. mine, within the sight of Mrs. Hartung and a gentleman who were following him to prevent his trying to take his life. The Hartungs are well known in Reno, where they conducted the Palace Bakery for a number of years.

The Chronicle of last evening gives the verdict of the coroner's inquest as follows: After hearing the evidence the jury rendered the following verdict: We, the undersigned jurors, summoned to appear before W. S. Cooke, Coroner of the County of Storey, at Virginia City, Nev., on the 8th day of June, 1891, to inquire into the cause of the death of Fred Boegle, having been first duly sworn according to law, and having made such inquiry after inspecting the body and hearing the testimony adduced, each and all of us do say that the deceased was named Fred Boegle, a native of St. Louis, Mo., and was aged 18 years, and that he came to his death in this county on the 7th day of June, 1891, by taking strychnine administered by his own hands.

The Chronicle gives the following sequel: "O. Hartung, who was the prime cause through his insults, of young Boegle's death, disposed of his business between daylight and dark this morning and was driven by team to Verdi, where he took the train for California in the early morning light. It may be the dreaded vengeance of an injured parent for the murder of an innocent son—perhaps his conscience pricked him. Be that as it may, it is for the public to decide."

Mr. Hartung is in Reno and asks that the public stand judgment until they know the facts that led up to the unfortunate affair.

Pioche Mines.

The Pioche Record reports of the old Mendha mine, that in former years was worked by Henry Mathey now of the Calajco tin mines, as follows:

The Mendha mine at Highland continues to improve as greater depth is attained. The new incline is now below the deepest workings of the old company, some fifty feet, vertically, and richer ore is encountered here than in the upper workings, and there is plenty of it. The new incline is just what is wanted by the company, and it assays high. It was regarded in the early days as a low grade proposition, but times have changed so that properties, which a few years ago were neglected because the ore didn't assay away up into the hundreds, are now being picked up and cared for and will soon be worked actively.

Grand Officers Elected.

Last evening after the GAZETTE's press hour the Grand Chapter of R. A. M. elected the following officers for the ensuing year: C. W. Hinchliffe of Austin, Grand High Priest; Albert Lackey of Gold Hill, Dept. Grand High Priest; J. W. Eckley of Virginia, Grand King; R. H. Kinney of Reno, Grand Scribe; C. A. Bragg of Reno, Grand Treasurer; C. N. Noteware of Carson, Grand Secretary; O. B. Vincent of Austin, G. C. of H.; Stewart Logan of Gold Hill, R. A. C. At 10:30 this morning Past Grand High Priest John H. Hubbs duly installed the newly elected officers and the Grand Chapter closed its labors for the session.

Fourth of July Matters.

A goodly number of citizens attended the adjourned Fourth of July meeting last night at the Justice Court room, and after a further discussion of the subject were still anxious to do something to entertain the people who will spend that day in Reno. J. J. Becker, John A. Pothoff and J. A. Zeigler were appointed a committee to canvas the town for subscriptions to defray the expenses, and the meeting adjourned to meet at the same place next Thursday evening and hear the report of the committee.

Carried His Keg Full.

The Virginia City papers of yesterday are jubilating over the extraordinary feat performed by a man named Leo Heckinger, who succeeded in getting his keg full of beer and carrying it to the top of Mt. Davidson and back to C street in 2 hours and 20 minutes. It was, to say the least, an elevating example to set before the rising youth of the Comstock, who are, from the reports of their daily papers, ready to emulate such feats without much urging.

A Sleeper for Carson.

Commencing Saturday next, June 13th, a through sleeper will be put on the road between San Francisco and Carson. This will be a great accommodation to passengers on the V. & T. and C. & C. roads and please the Lake Tahoe travel.

Its Excellent Qualities.

Command to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Pines. It is pleasing to the eye, and to the taste, and by gentle action on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Of the Different Departments of the Nevada State University.

The commencement exercises of the senior class of the Commercial Department of the Nevada State University will occur at McKissick's Opera House on Wednesday evening June 10th. The graduates comprise the following nine students: Charles A. Goe, T. Clinton Buttery, Cora E. Light, Ella T. Malone, Sadie F. Malone, Mabel F. Nash, Roy L. Robinson, C. Edward Titus and Mamie M. Van Reed, and the GAZETTE local, speaking from his acquaintance with the class, feels satisfied that they are fully entitled to the honor of graduation to be conferred upon them, for they were worthy and diligent students and have striven hard to accomplish their work. The senior class of the

NORMAL DEPARTMENT

Of the Nevada State University will hold its Commencement Exercises on Thursday, June 11th, at 2 o'clock P. M. at the Opera House. The graduates comprise: Misses Mollie Applegate, Mary Clark, Kate E. ## THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

Of '91 will hold their Commencement Exercises on Thursday evening at the Opera House. It consists of three graduates only, viz: Frederick A. Bristol, Frank H. Norcross and Henry C. Cutting. As these are the first to receive degrees from the Nevada State University, although it has been established for 20 years, much interest is felt over the event, and the young men will be looked at with critical eyes and expected to give evidence of bright attainments.

There being so many graduates from the different departments of the University this year, it was considered advisable by those in authority to give each class a time for its own graduating exercises and hence it was fixed for the dates above named.

CUMSO—"Are you cutting the sensation articles out of that paper before taking it home to your wife and daughters?" Banks (handling the shears):—"No! I'm cutting out the millinery advertisements."

BROWN—"And I saw there a curious affair. Really, I can't describe it. It hadn't the likeness of anything that is in heaven above or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth." FOGG—"Oh, I see. It was a prize cup won in some yacht race."

THE "SPOTTER" NECESSARY.

A General Passenger Agent Talks About the Conductor's Plait.

"It seems natural that all persons engaged in handling money should object to being watched," said General Passenger Agent Eustis of the Burlington to a Chicago News reporter. "But what other system can be employed to do away with the railroad 'spotter'?"

The latter is just as necessary an adjunct to the operation of a railroad as he is to the federal government. We must be protected from unscrupulous employees."

Mr. Eustis' remarks were called forth by a dispatch which told how the conductors in convention assembled at St. Louis had announced the "spotter" system as unnecessary and an outrage upon the hard-working ticket puncher.

"It is a mistaken idea the public has in thinking that a railroad detective is obliged to prove a certain number of employees are dishonest in order to show that he is doing his work. In reality it is just the reverse. The conductors who make the greatest clamor about the 'spotter' gradually come to realize the necessity of their presence. A detective never reports that a 'certain employee is dishonest.' He has nothing to do with that at all. In sending his report the spotter merely states that a person boarded the train and sat in a certain seat in the car (he detects) was on, and that the passenger gave the conductor some cash and left the train at such or such a station. This report is then compared with the conductor's."

"This constitutes the work of a detective. A conductor is only dismissed when his shortage continues several months in succession. We had in our employ a short time ago a conductor who was constantly declaiming against the secret-service system. In one of the meetings of the 'Q' conductors this man made a number of very stirring speeches against the spotter. After the meeting had adjourned I asked him to step into my office. He did so, and I pointedly told him we would not allow any more of his stealing and that he must stop deeply hurt at the imputation, but who had produced the reports and showed him that we had evidence that he was dishonest he weakened and promised to reform. Since then his reports have invariably tallied with those of the detectives. No, the secret-service system must be employed, and honest men, while they dislike the idea, have come to look at it in the true light, and accept it as one of the inevitables."

THE "SPOTTER" NECESSARY.

A General Passenger Agent Talks About the Conductor's Plait.

"It seems natural that all persons engaged in handling money should object to being watched," said General Passenger Agent Eustis of the Burlington to a Chicago News reporter. "But what other system can be employed to do away with the railroad 'spotter'?"

The latter is just as necessary an adjunct to the operation of a railroad as he is to the federal government. We must be protected from unscrupulous employees."

Mr. Eustis' remarks were called forth by a dispatch which told how the conductors in convention assembled at St. Louis had announced the "spotter" system as unnecessary and an outrage upon the hard-working ticket puncher.

"It is a mistaken idea the public has in thinking that a railroad detective is obliged to prove a certain number of employees are dishonest in order to show that he is doing his work. In reality it is just the reverse. The conductors who make the greatest clamor about the 'spotter' gradually come to realize the necessity of their presence. A detective never reports that a 'certain employee is dishonest.' He has nothing to do with that at all. In sending his report the spotter merely states that a person boarded the train and sat in a certain seat in the car (he detects) was on, and that the passenger gave the conductor some cash and left the train at such or such a station. This report is then compared with the conductor's."

"This constitutes the work of a detective. A conductor is only dismissed when his shortage continues several months in succession. We had in our employ a short time ago a conductor who was constantly declaiming against the secret-service system. In one of the meetings of the 'Q' conductors this man made a number of very stirring speeches against the spotter. After the meeting had adjourned I asked him to step into my office. He did so, and I pointedly told him we would not allow any more of his stealing and that he must stop deeply hurt at the imputation, but who had produced the reports and showed him that we had evidence that he was dishonest he weakened and promised to reform. Since then his reports have invariably tallied with those of the detectives. No, the secret-service system must be employed, and honest men, while they dislike the idea, have come to look at it in the true light, and accept it as one of the inevitables."
